PLC Armidale is located in the city of Armidale within New South Wales, providing day and boarding facilities to over 300 students. The college will celebrate its 120th year of providing excellence in education in 2007.

The boarding facilities offer privacy and security for students, and vary from neat and attractive cubicles for younger students to private individual rooms for senior students. All students have access to computer networks and the internet through the schools wireless network, available throughout all boarding rooms.

In addition students have access to recreation rooms, sporting facilities and weekend activities ensuring that any spare time can be productively spent.

Being centrally located in the cosmopolitan city of Armidale holds many benefits, including access to quality shopping, fine cafés and dining experiences.

Armidale is surrounded by World Heritage listed National Parks, which provides for bushwalking, swimming and adventure sports activities.

PLC Armidale along with the University of New England and other private schools form the Armidale Advantage, and ensure that Armidale remains a centre of academic excellence.
