St Philip's College in Alice Springs (the Heart of Australia), is a Uniting Church day and boarding co-educational secondary school for approx 600 students. The College began as Griffiths House in 1945 in the town centre, and moved to its present site on the outskirts in 1965.

The school community is very diverse, and that diversity is enriched by the boarders who come from Central Australia, Western Australia, the Top End of the Northern Territory, and the far north of South Australia.

The boarding facility provides accommodation for up to 50 boarders, with the junior students in twin share rooms and the seniors in private rooms. A vibrant exchange program adds an inter-national flavour to the boarding house.

Teaching staff also live on campus and work in the boarding houses, so there is a very good relationship between the boarding houses and the day school.
