Wongutha Christian Aboriginal Parent-directed School is situated in farming country approx 5 km from the town of Gibson in the south central region of WA, some 20 km north of Esperance.

Wongutha caters for Yrs 11-12 Aboriginal students who wish to pursue vocational studies in a caring, Christian environment. The whole educational program is vocationally directed, and the school curriculum is flexible and able to respond to the training requirements for changing employment for Aboriginal students.

The school is on the premises and available only to the boarders, and offers academic, farm and vocational studies.

All students are intensively prepared for work and then involved in a work experience (Structured Workplace Learning) program. Students in the program are supported by SWL mentors.

Many Indigenous staff are employed in the school and hostel to ensure that students are supported by a sympathetic environment.
